

	Acknowledgements	vii
	Contents	ix
	Introduction	3
PART	I European Film Policies: Between Art and Commerce
CHAPTER	I EU Film Law and Policy
I	The European Union and cinema: free market vs. diversity of cultures	11
I.1	The origins of the EU audiovisual policy	11
I.2	The EU competence over audiovisual and film policy	12
I.3	Evolution of the EU audiovisual policy	14
2	Film policy and the EU common market	18
2.1	Establishing a single market for films	19
2.2	Film in light of the internal market freedoms	22
2.2.1	Films as goods or services?	22
2.2.2	Free movement of cinematographic goods	26
2.2.2.1	Films as physical goods crossing borders: the ECJ approach	26
2.2.2.2	Taxation of cinematographic goods	28
2.2.3	Free movement of services and freedom of establishment in the film sector	30
2.2.3.1	Realisation of free market for film services through secondary law	30
2.2.3.2	ECJ jurisprudence and free movement of film services	35
2.2.4	Free movement of workers and co-production agreements	40
3	EU film policy and cultural diversity	43
3.1	EU and culture	43
3.2	EU law provisions on culture and audiovisual policy	45
4	Elements of EU film policy	47
4.1	Financial support measures	48
4.1.1	History of EU support to the film industry	48
4.1.1.1	Policy crystallisation: from great ambitions to MEDIA I	48
4.1.1.2	Ups and downs: MEDIA II and the failure of the EU Guarantee Fund	52
4.1.1.3	Towards 21st century: MEDIA Plus and MEDIA Training programmes	57
4.1.1.3.1	Genesis and legal basis of 2000 MEDIA programmes	57
4.1.1.3.2	Content of MEDIA programmes	59
4.1.1.3.3	Evaluation of MEDIA programmes	60
4.1.2	Current EU film funding mechanisms	64
4.1.2.1	MEDIA 2007 programme	64
4.1.2.2	European Investment Bank's i2i Audiovisual initiative	66
4.2	Regulatory measures for the film industry	68
4.2.1	EU content requirements	68

	4.2.1.1	Genesis of ‘Television without Frontiers’ Directive quotas	68
	4.2.1.2	Legality of quota provisions	72
	4.2.1.3	Scope and the legal nature of EU quotas	76
	4.2.1.3.1	Broadcasting quotas: problems of definition	78
	4.2.1.3.2	Independent production quotas	82
	4.2.1.4	Effectiveness of the quotas and their future prospects	83
	4.2.1.5	Promotion of European works on on-demand services	87
	4.2.2	Ownership regulations	90
	4.3	Cinema and EU soft law	92
	4.3.1	Cinematographic heritage protection	92
	4.3.2	Film online	94
	4.4	Film markets and EU competition law regime	95
	4.4.1	On relevance of competition law for film policy	95
	4.4.2	Film policy vs. competition law: scope of analysis	97
	4.5	International aspects of EU film policy	99
	4.5.1	From Cannes to MEDIA Mundus	99
	4.5.2	EU film policy goes global: two sides of the same coin	100
PART	II	Film Policy and EU Competition Law: Hostility or Symbiosis?
CHAPTER	2	Public Film Support and EU State Aid Law
	I	Introductory remarks	105
	I.1	A preliminary observation: film support as state aid?	105
	I.2	Distortion of the internal market by subsidies	107
	I.3	Market definition in state aid law	107
	I.4	The framework of analysis	108
	2	Qualifying measures to support the film sector as state aid	110
	2.1	Aid granted by the state or through state resources	110
	2.2	Economic advantage	118
	2.3	Support for certain undertakings or the production of certain goods	124
	2.3.1	Notion of undertaking	124
	2.3.2	Selectivity	125
	2.4	Distortion of competition and effect on intra-Community trade	126
	3	Exemptions from EU state aid law and their relevance for European cinema	130
	3.1	General approach of the Commission and the ECJ	130
	3.2	Application of Article 87 (3) EC Treaty to the film sector: historical evolution	131
	3.3	Elements of the evaluation	137
	3.3.1	General legality criteria	137
	3.3.2	Compensatory justification principle	138
	3.3.2.1	Suitability	139

3.3.2.2	Necessity	139
3.3.2.3	Proportionality	140
3.4	The Commission guidelines on state aid to the film sector	140
3.4.1	Historical context	140
3.4.2	The content of the Commission's guidelines	141
3.4.3	The application of the Commission's criteria	143
3.4.4	A critical assessment of the Commission's guidelines	144
3.4.4.1	Response to the 2001 Communication	144
3.4.4.2	Binding effect of the guidelines	146
3.4.4.3	Evaluation of the key elements of the guidelines	148
3.4.5	Towards a future state aid framework for cinema	162
CHAPTER 3	Private Conduct in the Film Market and EU Competition Law
I	Film markets under competition scrutiny	169
I.1	Specificity of film markets in light of EU competition law	169
I.1.1	Structure of the market	169
I.1.2	Exclusivity	170
I.1.3	Price determination	171
I.1.4	Imperfect competition and market failure	172
I.2	Competition concerns in the film sector	175
I.2.1	Anti-competitive agreements	176
I.2.2	Barriers to entry	176
I.2.3	Vertical integration between distribution and exhibition	178
I.2.4	Abusive conduct of dominant players	181
I.2.5	Media concentration features	183
I.3	Cinema and competition: a sector-specific approach?	184
2	Application of EU competition rules to the film sector	185
2.1	Private competition in film markets and cultural diversity	185
2.2	Parameters of market power analysis in the film industry	188
2.2.1	Market definition	188
2.2.1.1	Product market	189
2.2.1.1.1	Substitutability of films	191
2.2.1.1.2	Substitutability of media	196
2.2.1.2	Geographic market	201
2.2.2	Measuring market power in film markets	203
3	Antitrust enforcement and cultural diversity in European cinema	205
3.1	Restrictive agreements and concerted practices	205
3.1.1	Access of exhibitors and broadcasters to films: the problem of exclusivity	207
3.1.1.1	Theatrical exhibition	208
3.1.1.2	Film licensing to video, television and Internet	209
3.1.2	Access of films to screens	211
3.1.2.1	Theatrical exhibition	213

	3.1.2.1.1	Alignment by distributors and exhibitors	213
	3.1.2.1.2	Price-fixing	214
	3.1.2.1.3	Conditional booking	214
	3.1.2.1.4	Multilevel coordination	216
	3.1.2.1.5	Joint selling	217
	3.1.2.2	Film licensing to video and broadcasting	223
	3.1.2.2.1	Joint selling	223
	3.1.2.2.2	Most favoured nation clauses	224
	3.1.2.3	Internet delivery	229
	3.1.3	Media chronology	230
	3.2	Abuse of dominant position by media operators	235
	3.2.1	Access of independent exhibitors to films	235
	3.2.2	Access of films to exhibition channels	238
	3.2.2.1	Cinema theatres	239
	3.2.2.1.1	Minimum exhibition periods and screen use restrictions	239
	3.2.2.1.2	Conditional booking	241
	3.2.2.1.3	Distributors' influence over price	242
	3.2.2.2	Television broadcasting	243
	3.2.2.3	New outlets: online delivery	244
	3.2.2.3.1	Tying practices	245
	4	Impact of EU concentration control in the media sector on European cinema	247
	4.1	European merger control framework	247
	4.2	Concentration control and media pluralism	248
	4.3	EU merger control and European cinema	249
	4.3.1	EU merger control and cultural diversity	249
	4.3.2	Competition concerns in merger cases relevant for diversity in the film sector	251
	4.3.2.1	Theatrical exhibition markets	251
	4.3.2.2	Film aftermarkets	253
	4.3.2.2.1	Gatekeeper issue	253
	4.3.2.2.2	Foreclosure of input markets	255
	4.3.3	Remedies in EU mergers: a contribution to diversity in the film sector	257
	4.3.3.1	Access to content (premium films)	258
	4.3.3.2	Access of films to infrastructure	261
	4.3.3.3	Culturally sensitive merger control?	262
PART	III	Diversity in EU Cinema and WTO Law: the Beauty and the Beast?
CHAPTER	4	International Trade Law Rules and European Film Policies
	I	EU vs. US on audiovisual trade under the WTO	269
	I.1	History of EU-US tensions: from GATT to Uruguay to Doha and beyond	269

CONTENTS

1.2	Setting the current context: Doha and beyond	275
2	Film policy in the context of international trade law	278
2.1	Economic integration and cultural diversity in the film sector	278
2.2	Compatibility of audiovisual policies with WTO regimes	279
2.3	Legal status of the medium of film under WTO law	281
3	Impact of WTO law on European film policies	285
3.1	Overview of film policy tools potentially restrictive of international trade	285
3.1.1	Content requirements: controversy over quotas	285
3.1.2	Financial support measures	286
3.1.3	Cinematographic co-production agreements	287
3.1.4	Media ownership laws	288
3.1.5	Other measures with effect on trade	289
3.2	Film support and the GATT	289
3.2.1	Prohibition of quantitative restrictions on film imports	289
3.2.1.1	Screen quotas	289
3.2.1.2	Film policy tools in light of GATT safeguard clause and general exemptions	292
3.2.2	General GATT rules on non-discrimination and film support	293
3.2.2.1	National treatment	293
3.2.2.2	Most favoured nation (MFN) principle and cultural cooperation	298
3.2.3	Agreement on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures	299
3.2.3.1	Prohibited ('red box') subsidies	300
3.2.3.2	Non-actionable ('green box') subsidies	300
3.2.3.3	Actionable ('amber box') subsidies	301
3.3	Film support and the GATS	303
3.3.1	General GATS principles on non-discrimination and film services	303
3.3.2	Film policy and GATS general exceptions	306
3.3.3	Classification of audiovisual services under the GATS	307
3.3.4	Subsidies to film services and the GATS	309
3.4	Other WTO disciplines relevant for film policies	311
3.4.1	Communications services convergence in the information society	312
3.4.1.1	Telecommunications Agreement	312
3.4.1.2	Electronic commerce	314
3.4.2	TRIPs Agreement and film copyright	318
3.4.3	WTO investment rules: TRIMs and beyond	320
3.4.4	Outstanding issue: international competition rules	322

CHAPTER 5	Prospective Solutions for Embracing Film Policies at the International Level
I	Future treatment of audiovisuals under WTO law: an outlook	327
I.1	General WTO rules and film policies	327
I.2	EU film policy acquis: can it take us further on the audiovisual issue?	330
I.3	EU and WTO: towards a common law of international trade?	332
2	EU as a model for reconciling culture and trade	334
2.1	UNESCO Convention: Article 151 for the world legal order?	334
2.1.1	Genesis and key principles of international instrument on cultural diversity	334
2.1.2	The EU's role in the development and shape of the UNESCO Convention	338
2.1.3	The UNESCO Convention's relationship to WTO law instruments	341
2.2	Looking beyond: cultural exemptions and competition rules for the WTO	348
2.2.1	Cultural exemptions to WTO regimes	349
2.2.1.1	Regulatory need for rules on subsidies to audiovisual services	349
2.2.1.2	Derogation for cultural cooperation agreements	353
2.2.1.3	Additional exception solutions	354
2.2.2	Competition rules for the WTO: a level playing field in the world cinema market?	355
2.2.2.1	Current WTO rules relating to competition	355
2.2.2.2	Towards an international law of antitrust?	357
2.2.2.3	Potential impact of a WTO competition agreement on diversity in cinema	358
3	From defence to action: cultural diversity affirmed and implemented globally	363
CHAPTER 6	Conclusion
	Bibliography	374
	Table of Legislation and Decisions	422
	Table of Cases	430
	Table of Equivalence	436